Agents of the Year - Goodman's good ones

Date 27 November 2007

Release Immediate

The prestigious 2007 Goodman Agent of the Year Awards have been won by Cameron Grier, CB Richard Ellis in NSW, Andrew O'Connell, Jones Lang LaSalle in Victoria and Mark Boylon, CB Richard Ellis in South Australia.

Goodman's Asia Pacific Chief Executive Officer, David van Aanholt said, the Awards were an important way to recognise the significant contribution made by agents to the success of Goodman's own+develop+manage model.

"2007 has been a landmark year for the Group, with a number of key deals here in Australia. The agency community has played a pivotal role in many of these deals, and these prestigious Agent Awards are our way rewarding them for their contribution."

Criteria's for the awards included level of customer service as well as dedication to the deal, supporting Goodman's own commitment to creating long term customer relationships.

"As long term owners of industrial property and business space, we are absolutely focussed on providing exceptional standards of service, allowing us to build greater customer satisfaction and lasting relationships. It is critical that our agents provide this same high level of customer service when working with our customers," David said."

In NSW, Cameron Grier took out the top award based on his commitment to Goodman, annual net rentals generated, level of customer service supplied and the degree of difficulty of the deals. Cameron also took out the NSW Best Development Award.

In Victoria, Andrew O'Connell won for his contribution in closing the Patties Foods deal at Chifley Business Park, with a special note made of his commitment and his consistent support to the Goodman team
